WHO DRAGS THE ROADS?

We understood that the roads that have been graded in the county were to be taken care of by having them dragged at intervals by people along the roads. For instance, the Columbia to Ashford branch, was to have been dragged after each rain, and kept in shape, and the Ashford to Dothan branch by another, and so on, all over the sections of roads that have been finished. That was to keep the roads from washing up, and to keep from having to take the road machine and a crew to go over them.

It so happened that we didn't have any rain this year, till fodder pulling time, and the roads got little dragging and didn't need much. But here of late, rains have been falling, and the roads have been rapidly going to ruin. They are gullying up and ruts are being cut that will fast put them in bad shape. They don't seem to have been dragged since the rains started.

There are many people who cannot understand how it is that cotton isn't selling for a higher price when there is plenty of money to handle the crop. Well, people who buy cotton have to sell it. The people they sell to have to know that the goods will have a market, and so long as the war cloud hangs over Europe, where so much of our cotton is shipped, the sale of cotton goods is uncertain. Just because the banks have millions of dollars with which to handle cotton is no reason why the price will be changed. It isn't scarcity of money, but the lack of selling arrangements outside of the United States.

Well, if Dothan has a bad reputation we know the cause of it. We of Dothan have the ability to make its reputation spotless, or as near spotless as a city of this size could be made. If it has a bad reputation away from home, we are the cause of it, or a part of us. We have had abundant opportunity to bring about changes but we did not, for various and sundry reasons, most of which were of a financial nature.

It is stretching it a little too far when papers accuse O'Neal of wanting to call the legislature together after the November election in order to get in a few licks for liquor before Charles Henderson takes hold. Much as O'Neal would like to do it, he couldn't afford to call the legislature together, as he has been opposing an extra session for three years.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS.

Walt Mason in Emporia, (Kan.) Gazette.

"We'll have a new boarder here tomorrow," announced the landlady. "He's a great musician, and the way he can play a piano is astonishing. I have no doubt he'll consent to play for the company here in the evenings, when he has time.

"Neither have I any doubt, Mrs. Jiggers," said the star boarder, gloomily. "When there is a great musician in a boarding house, no trouble is experienced in getting him to play; the difficulties begin when you try to persuade him to quit. I often wonder why people who play or sing are so industrious. They never know when to let well enough alone.

"I have not forgotten the last distinguished musician we had in this house. He kept the piano going on the day and night shift until the boarders sent him a round robin inviting him to abduct himself. If my memory serves me, some rather sanguine threats were added to the letter, and it was because of this that the professor left this establishment by way of the kitchen roof and the rain pipe, leaving you in the hole to the extent of $3. I have always regretted this feature of the affair, because I know you needed the money; but otherwise the departure of that celebrated artist was a relief to everybody.

"It was impossible to read or talk while he was in the house. He kept on abusing the piano until I felt like sending a complaint to the society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Musical Instruments.

"I remember quite well the first evening he was here. I was taking lessons in elocution then, and my teacher told me I was the warmest number he ever saw. He told me with tears of happiness streaming down his wan cheeks, that I had Mrs. Siddons backed off the map, and he predicted a great future for me. I had just recited 'Danny Deever' in his presence, and my rendition of that masterpiece moved him to his profoundest depths. At that time my tuition was paid for two weeks in advance, so his enthusiasm may easily be understood. Two weeks later, when the time I had paid for was expired, and I tried to stand him off, he revoked all the flattering things he had said about me, and assured me that I had a voice like a saw running through a rusty nail, and that if I ever appeared in public to recite, it would be impossible to restrain the fury of the mob.

"But all this is neither here nor there, Mrs. Jiggers. I merely mention the matter because it brings a sidelight upon the human nature. The evening when he gave me such warm praise, I hastened home to this boarding house, intent upon reciting 'Danny Deever,' after supper. There was a new boarder here, a man with lemonade whiskers and long hair. You introduced him as the only rival of Paderewski, and said he had kindly consented to play a selection on the piano. After eating our frugal meal we adjourned to the sitting room. I thought the professor would play perhaps two tunes, certainly not more than three; then I would have a chance to hold the audience spell-bound with 'Danny Deever.'

"The professor played for an hour and a half without a break, and then he swung around on his stool and began mopping the sweat from his brow, and as the applause died down I stood up and began clearing my throat to announce that I would now render Rudyard Kipling's masterpiece, but before I could get into action the professor whirled around to the piano again and played all of Beethoven's Sonatas, one after the other. It was after midnight when I tired, but I felt it my duty to contribute to the evening's entertainment, so I reared up once more and began to explain that I would endeavor to recite that magnificent poem, when the professor, having got his wind again, made another assault upon the piano.

"You will remember what followed, my dear Mrs. Jiggers. I knocked him off the stool with the stuffed swan you used to keep on the mantel, and then I handed him his hat and invited him to disappear in the gloom, which he did. I then had the floor to myself, so to speak, but I was so incensed that I made no effort to recite 'Danny Deever,' and thus you missed a great intellectual treat."

We can now see that war comes when nations prepare for it, and talk it, and drill it into the youth of the nation. Germany has been making big preparations for war for many years. The big chief has taught the soldiers that it was coming, and whenever the people were asked to pay out more taxes they were taught that it was necessary, to help build the war machinery. Probably the powers see that a war had to come to make the people pay war tax liberally and cheerfully.

The Rev. McNeill is telling the people of Dothan some truths about themselves and it does not take well with them. From all reports that reach this office, Dothan is the Gomorrah of Alabama.—Troy Herald.

And Troy may be the Sodom of Alabama—with its open saloons. All it needs, perhaps, is a bold and fearless McNeill to tell about it.—Montgomery Times.

The many friends here that Dr. H. H. McNeill left behind him when he departed from Opelika, hope to see him win out in his game fight for law enforcement in Dothan. Dr. McNeill is of the kind of folks who went to the stake in the ages gone by. He is just what he says he is, let it cost what it may.—Opelika News.

Had you noticed that for almost ten days, the headlines of all the papers carried great stories of battles soon to be fought? People want to read something about the war, and when nothing happens the press dispatches send something. They send what they think will happen, and often it does happen.

Food stuffs may go higher as a result of the war, and there are those who think somebody should be jailed for it. How many folks do you know, who, if they had all the wheat in the world, wouldn't hold it for just a little higher price, till just a little more money was realized out of it?

Every community in Alabama has its blind tiger element. Conditions now at Dothan, Ala., show how fearfully dangerous it is for the law-abiding people to divide on men and permit that element to cast the deciding vote in the selection of officers.—Opelika (Alabama) News.

One thing war in Europe has done: it has taught us a little more geography than we knew before, and it has also taught us that the man who carries a pistol wherever he goes, will in time, find a use for it.

A commission form of government couldn't be any worse, and the chances are it would make for better.

GEORGIA WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 18.—"I am going to the land of dreams," this time was found by the side of Paradise Gray today, and together with a cup containing the remains of a portion of creolin, explained why she was in a dying condition.

The woman took the drug with suicidal intent, but when assistance arrived she begged to be saved.

She will probably get well.

WAR GROWS MORE HUMANE

(By a United States Army Surgeon)

In the American Civil War eight soldiers died of disease to one from wounds. Experts expect that in the present general European struggle not more than three will fall victim to sickness to one killed on the field of battle.

Such is the advance of army sanitation and army surgery in fifty years. The Americans and the Japanese have been the leaders. The United States army hospitals have installed many remarkable innovations since the Spanish War with its dreadful lesson in the danger of typhoid and these new ideas have been adopted by the Army surgeon of old world powers.

So it is expected that the present war, the greatest yet in history will also be the most humane. There will be no disproportionate mortality lists from disease and no army of cripples as an aftermath.

The modern high-power, quick firing military rifle and the development in artillery will have much to do with the change.

Those who die will die more quickly. Gangrene and infection will be practically unknown quantities, it is thought.

Before the Russo-Japanese conflict the armies the world-over used a high-calibre bullet, made of unsheathed lead and greased to overcome friction in the barrel.

The muzzle velocity was less than half that of the missiles now employed.

Then, too, bayonets and sabre-charges were more common. These resulted in hideous wounds, very difficult for surgeons to handle.

The bullets which are flying in Europe today are of less diameter than the ordinary lead pencil. They are pocketed with nickle, lead or steel and have tremendous velocity.

The soft, mushrooming bullet of the old day resulted in the shattering of bones and the crushing, rather than cutting, of tissues. Infection was almost inevitable, the grease being especially unsanitary. A wound in the abdomen was considered necessarily fatal. The death rate among the wounded was enormous.

In recent campaigns there are instances where soldiers shot in what were once considered vital spots have walked unsupported to the field hospitals.

Germans use a Mausor rifle, with a bullet of 8 mm. calibre, steel and copper coated. Great Britain's missile is the Lee-Enfield, calibre 7.7 mm., the coating being cupro-nickel.

The French weapon is the Lebel rifle, of 8 mm. calibre, with bullets coated with nickel. Russia uses Mossin-Nagant rifles, calibre 7.62 mm., with bullets cupro-nickel coated. Austria's chief small arm is the Mannlicher, calibre 8 mm. with a steel sheet over the tip.

Hitting a man beyond 350 yards the wounds inflicted by all these bullets are clean cut. They frequently pass through bone tissue without splintering.

When meeting an artery the bullet usually pushes it to one side and goes around without cutting the blood channel.

Amputations are very rare compared with wars of more than fifty years ago. A bullet wound through a joint, such as the knee or the elbow, then necessitated the amputation of the limb. Now such a wound is easily opened and dressed.

Even Russia, which made a sad sanitary showing in the war with Japan, now has learned her lesson and has efficient surgical arrangements.

All the nations use vaccine to combat typhoid, the scourge which once decimated and killed 1,600 in our Spanish War.

Every army division (13,000 to 15,000 men) is supplied with four field hospitals, each capable of caring for 108 patients. There are also two evacuation hospitals, with a capacity of 700 each, for each division. The evacuation hospitals send the more seriously wounded back to the hospitals at home.

Then every officer is instructed in first aid treatment. This alleviates a great deal of suffering on the field of battle.

Next to typhoid dysentery is the great army scourge. This is attacked by sterilizing the drinking water.

History shows sanitation has often determined the fate of nations. In 1792 when the fine Prussian troops marched to the relief of Louis XVI the raw levies of the young republic met and repulsed them. General DuMouries, commander of the French troops, shows clearly in his report that the Prussians had been unfitted for service by dysentery. Ordinary sanitary precautions would have prevented this.

SPORTS

By Frank G. Menke.

New York, Aug. 19.—Willie Ritchie was a model champion. There are a number of persons who have been heaving brickbats at Willie since Freddie Welsh took away his world champion title, but a glance over Ritchie's record shows that he never ducked a real fighter. Ritchie unlike the champions in the other divisions, and unlike the champions in his class that preceded him, was a lemon picker.

When Ritchie fought, he gave the crowd the best he had. With Willie as one of the principals the crowd was sure that at least one party in the fighting contract would give the fans a run for their money. Ritchie never stalled—even his bitterest enemies cannot charge him with that.

While he held the championship, would beat him. Murphy he took on the best men in his class. He met Joe Rivers when the Mexican was at the zenith of his career. He tackled Leach cross in New York and that scrap was one of the greatest ever staged in this town. It was a hammer and tongs affair from the tap of the first gong. Ritchie moved and slugged. He never backed away from that terrific punch that Cross carries. He was boxing every minute of the way.

He fought such a fight with everything to lose and nothing to gain. The defeat of Cross could not add much glory to his name. His defeat by Cross meant the loss of his title.

Wolgast, from whom Ritchie took the title, scoffed at Ritchie's prowess. He reiterated a hundred times that if they ever met again he would be able to regain the crown. Ritchie took him on at Milwaukee—and Ritchie won.

Ritchie met Tommy Murphy, in response to Pacific Coast demands. They figured there that Murphy the battle, was highly touted. Ritchie made Murphy look like a punching bag durin gthe battle. Ritchie met Charley White, in Milwaukee, one of the toughest men in the lightweight division. Out there the fans say White gave Ritchie a beating. Ritchie denies it. But Ritchie says he is perfectly willing to take on White again at any time a sufficient purse is offered.

Ritchie went to England to fight Welsh. He knew before going that he either would have to knock out the Briton or lose. The American style of aggressiveness doesn't figure there except against him. The ducking and running counts for points. Ritchie know that—he knew that such a way was Welsh's style. But he didn't squirm out of the scrap. He showed that he doesn't own a yellow streak.

Ritchie was a popular champion. He made friends with the fans because he always was willing to give them the best he had. And that was considerable. Of course, Ritchie haggled a lot about his price. But that's what every other man does. He wants the most he can get for his service.

Arthur Pelky has announced his retirement from the ring. He never has been able to get back his nerve since his fight with Luther McCarty. It was Pelky's blow in the second round of that fight that sent McCarty down to his death. The shock of McCarty's death unsettled Pelky's nerves and he never since has fought even a fair fight. There always was a sort of timidity about his actions. He was afraid to hit.

Johnny Coulon, former bantam champion, has made a big hit with the members of the Working Boys Home in Chicago. He presented them with $1000—the money paid to him as a guarantee for his appearance in the ring with Kid Williams, of Baltimore. Johnny lost the title in that scrap, but he has made good his promise. And with the Chicago lads he is a king.

THE MATRIMONIAL PSALM.

Tell me not in idle jingle
Marriage is not an empty dream,
For the girl is dead that's single
And things are not as they seem.

Life is real, life is earnest,
Single blessedness a fib,
"Man thou art; to man returneth,"
Hath not been spoken of the rib.

Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end or way,
But to act that each tomorrow
Finds us nearer marriage day.

Life is short and youth is fleeting,
And our hearts, though light and gay,
Still like pleasant drums are beating
Funeral marches all the way.

Lives of married folk remind us
We can live our lives as well,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sand of battle,

In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dumb driven cattle,
Be a heroine and a wife.

Lives of married folks remind us
We can live our lives as well,
And, departing, leave behind us
Such examples as shall "tell."

Such examples that another,
Wasting life in idle sport,
A forlorn unmarried brother,
Seeing, shall take heart and court.

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart on triumph set
Still contriving, still pursuing,
And each one a husband get.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus B. Wells have returned to their home in Montgomery after a visit to relatives.

MRS. PENNYBACKER IN LONDON—

From Montgomery Journal.

Friends in this city of Mrs. Pennybacker will be interested in the following article taken from a Macon exchange.

"A letter from Mrs. Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Texas, tells of the latter's delightful stay in London, where she has spent the past several weeks with friends. With her daughter, Miss Ruth Pennybacker, who graduated from Bryn Mawr college in June, Mrs. Pennybacker plans to sail on August 29th, on the Minnesota, of the Atlantic Transport line, from Southampton. The letter was written the day after war was declared, but Mrs. Pennybacker seemed to feel no uneasiness.

"The many friends of Mrs. Pennybacker will be delighted to know that reports of her ill health are unfounded, as she is only very, very tired, and expects to resume her active work as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs on her return to the States."

Miss Elizabeth Holt of Montgomery is the attractive guest of Miss Florrie Malone.

Mrs. Mary E. Brown has returned from White Springs, and is with Mrs. G. M. Lewis. Miss Idoline Brown is visiting in Americus, Ga.

The Young Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. W. C. A. held a most delightful meeting with Miss Estelle Green on Tuesday afternoon. Sewing was enjoyed until dusk, when delightful sandwiches and tea were served.

Miss Willie Mae Whaley is the guest of Miss Eva Glenn.

G. Ernest Jones, senator-elect from Barbour and editor of the Clio Free Press, was in Dothan a while this morning.
